What are cookies?

Cookies are small pieces of text stored on your computer or device whenever you visit a website. Almost every website on the internet uses cookies for reasons such as verifying your identity, determining the type of browser and settings you use, and to enable site owners to tailor content to your preferences.

What do we use Cookies for?

We use cookies as part of a normal business procedure to track patterns of behaviour of visitors to our site and dealing platforms. We may store any information collected about you in this way which can be used to identify you when you visit our site in future, unless you change your browser settings or switch off cookies. By doing this we are able to provide an experience that is more relevant to you and aligned with your interests, as indicated by your activity on our site.

We also use ‘strictly necessary’ cookies which are required to ensure that our site operates properly. These cookies do not gather any information about you that could be used for marketing or remembering where you've been on the internet.

We identified the following strictly necessary cookies:

- token
- user_code
- user_name
- access_origin2
- cdn_url
- company_name
- lang

We may also use some non–essential cookies for performance, functionality, and targeting purposes, such as:

- Provide statistics on how visitors use our website
- Monitor the effectiveness of our adverts
- Identify errors with our website
- Test different website designs
- Provide advertising agencies with information on your visit so that they can present you with adverts that you may be interested in

We identified the following non–essential cookies:
